KERRIE'S BIO

Kerrie has recently joined Underwood Engineers after working part-time for many years while her two little boys grew into young men.

Kerrie would like to live in a world filled with sea glass-adorned beaches, an unending supply of good books that come bundled with sea salt caramel treats and a robot that can wash, dry, fold and put away endless amounts of laundry.

Kerrie grew up in Massachusetts and began her career in Boston working as a Legal Secretary for sports and entertainment lawyers and fast-paced trial lawyers. After being sought out by a large Boston consulting firm, she decided to try her hand as an Executive Assistant. She gave up the big city (and the 15-hour work days) shortly after getting married, and continued her career as an Executive Assistant for a seacoast company where she stayed until the arrival of her first son.

Kerrie's new career became that of Super Mom, as she raised her two boys and dedicated her spare time to volunteer boards. While raising tremendous amounts of money for local non-profit organizations and giving back to the community, Kerrie discovered an obsession for running. After the passing of her father, Kerrie joined the Dana Farber Marathon Challenge team to raise money for cancer research and raised in excess of $75,000 in her four years running the Boston Marathon.

When Kerrie's not on her yoga mat or whipping up something yummy in her kitchen, you'll probably find her sneaking off to the beach in search of treasures or soaking up every last ray of sun she can find.
